can't live without

LISAHO

Australian designer Lisa Ho admits her first trip to Paris, back who a fashion student, was nothing short of life-changing. "It opened the beauty and the culture – I'd never seen anything like it." Since stacked her light-filled workspace with souvenirs and collectables for the stacked her light-filled workspace with souvenirs and collectables for the stacked her light-filled workspace with souvenirs and collectables for the stacked her light-filled workspace with souvenirs and collectables for the stacked her light-filled workspace with souvenirs and collectables for the stacked her light-filled workspace with souvenirs and collectables for the stacked her light-filled workspace with souvenirs and collectables for the stacked her light-filled workspace with souvenirs and collectables for the stacked her light-filled workspace with souvenirs and collectables for the stacked her light-filled workspace with souvenirs and collectables for the stacked her light-filled workspace with souvenirs and collectables for the stacked her light-filled workspace with souvenirs and collectables for the stacked her light-filled workspace with souvenirs and collectables for the stacked her light-filled workspace with souvenirs and collectables for the stacked her light-filled workspace with souvenirs and collectables for the stacked her light-filled workspace with souvenirs and collectables for the stacked her light-filled workspace with souvenirs and stacked her light-filled workspace with stacked her light-filled workspace with souvenirs and stacked her light-filled workspace with souvenirs and stacked her light-filled workspace with stacked her light-filled workspace wit